CHALLENGING OUR STUDENTS

SEWANEE: THE UNIVERSITY OF THE SOUTH COURSES

Juniors with a cumulative GPA of 90 or higher and seniors with a cumulative GPA of 87 or higher are eligible to enroll in credit-earning courses at Sewanee: The University of the South. These students attend classes taught by University professors alongside University students. All courses taken at Sewanee are recorded on an official transcript issued by the University and do not count toward SAS graduation requirements. For these reasons, our arrangement is not considered dual enrollment. As a result of offering this genuine college experience, we do not offer Advanced Placement courses.

INDEPENDENT STUDY, with the approval of the Curriculum Committee and under the guidance of a faculty sponsor, is an option for qualified juniors and seniors who submit proposals that clearly demonstrate academic substance and rigor.

ADVANCED CLASSES are available for students seeking additional challenges in math and science. The Academic Dean will work with students to explore these opportunities, taking into account their prior coursework and academic abilities. These courses are taught by faculty with advanced degrees and are conducted at a college seminar level.

RELIGIOUS STUDIES is a required course for all seniors. This college seminar level course offers students an exploration of religion as a phenomenon common to humanity. Texts for this class include: Dynamics of Faith by Paul Tillich, Sidhartha by Hermann Hesse, God Is Not One by Stephen Prothero, and Justice by Michael Sandel.

PLACE-BASED EDUCATION is highly interdisciplinary and combines our physical geography with our local and regional history, institutions, politics, and culture. All departments strive to integrate place-based experiences into the curriculum because it deepens learning, increases engagement, and creates a unique sense of place. Courses offered include Place-Based American Studies, Environmental Literature, and Field Geology.

CUMBERLAND SCHOLARS

The Cumberland Scholars program is designed for students passionate about the environment, inspired by nature, and invigorated by outdoor adventure. Through this program, students can elevate their interests by fulfilling a unique set of place-based and outdoor requirements, ultimately graduating with honors. The path to this distinction includes academic study, experiential learning, technical skill demonstrations, and service commitments. The journey culminates in the spring of the student's senior year with a public presentation of a capstone research project focused on place-based or outdoor education. For more information on this unique program, go to sasweb.org/academics/Cumberland-scholars.
